

ABSTRACT

This invention provides a method of making a fluorinated precursor of a superconducting ceramic. The method comprises providing a solution comprising a 5 rare earth salt, an alkaline earth metal salt and a copper salt; spraying the solution onto a substrate to provide a film-covered substrate; and heating the film-covered substrate in an atmosphere containing fluorinated gas to provide the fluorinated precursor.

175967